Earthworm Anatomy

- Earthworms are invertebrates they do not have backbones.
- Like humans, earthworms have bilateral symmetry.
- The prostomium, a flap that covers the mouth in some species, is a sensory device.

1 cm

2 cm

3 cm

4 cm

5 cm

0[']cm

- Earthworms do not have lungs they can breathe through their skin as long as it stays moist.
- Because earthworms do not have teeth, they use a gizzard to grind up large pieces of food.
- Earthworms are hermaphrodites their bodies contain both male and female reproductive organs.

